RUY, the proper name Rodrigo abbreviated; as, Ruy Gómez, for Rodrigo Gómez.

RUYBA'REO, rhubarb, an excellent remedy, found no where but in China, whence it is carried to all parts. The best is the freshest, which has something of a dark red, bitter, and astringent to the taste; and which chew'd, dies like saffron: it is hot and dry in the second degree, has some earthy parts which make it astringent, some airy, whence its lightness, and some fiery, which cause its bitterness. Rhubarb is so safe a medicine, that it is given at all times, and to children, and women with child. To purge and cleanse the inward parts, they give the infusion of it, and the powder of it to bind; mix'd with spikenard, it has the better effect. It will not bear decoction, for then it loses its virtue; it purges choler and flegm, cleanses the stomach, strengthens the liver and milt, opens obstructions, purges the blood, is good against the yellow jaundice and dropsy, allays burning fevers, and stops the bloody-flux. Chris. Acosta. Nat. Hist. E. Ind.

R U Y

Prov. No se acuerda la suegra, que fué su madre: The mother-in-law does not remember she was a daughter-in-law. We say, the parson forgets he was clerk.

Prov. Para mi no puedo, y devanaré para mi suegra: I cannot wind (thread or yarn) for my self, and I shall do it for my mother-in-law. Very unlikely that those who will not work for themselves should do it for those they do not love.

Prov. Aquella es bien casada, que ni tiene suegra, ni cuñada: She is well marry'd, who has neither mother-in-law, nor sister-in-law by her husband. Because in Spain they have no good conceit of that kindred by affinity.

Prov. La suegra rogada, y la olla repogada: The mother-in-law must be irritated, and the pot stand to steep after boiling. That is, sons and daughters-in-law are to show respect to their mother-in-law, and the meat and pottage eats the better for standing a while close cover'd in the pot, after it is taken off the fire.

Prov. Al que vive con suegra, cedo se le muera: May he that has a mother-in-law have her die quickly. Because of the ill opinion Spaniards have of mothers-in-law.

Prov. A suegras leídas, tiradas llénas: Drunken mothers-in-law should have full jars or casks of wine. Because if they love drinking it is better to have it in the house, than be always sending for it.

Prov. 'Obra comenzada, no te la véa suegra, ni cuñada: Let not your mother-in-law, nor daughter-in-law see the work you have begun. Because they have an ill conceit of these relations; and therefore it is not fit to let them know what you are about till it is done, lest they obstruct it, or take pleasure in your not finishing it.

SUE'GRO, a father-in-law by marriage, the wife's, or the husband's father. Lat. socer.

Prov. Aunque mi suegro sea bueno, no quiero perro con cencerro: Tho my father-in-law is a good man, I will not have a dog with a bell. The saying of one who had a good father-in-law in all respects, excepting only that he told all he saw, or heard, and therefore he compar'd him to a dog with a bell, who never stirs but he is heard.

Prov. Así medre mi suegro, como la cama tras el fuego: May my father-in-law thrive as the bed does by the fire. Either sparks fly and burn it, or people sit on it, or other misfortunes befall it, and the same ill fate the proverb wishes a father-in-law.

Prov. Apaña suegro, para quien te herede, manto de luto, corazón alegre: Gather wealth father-in-law for your heir, who will have a mourning cloak, and a joyful heart. A good admonition for those that never cease scraping together for their heirs, who put on a joyful mourning when they dye.

Prov. Para mi no puedo, y devanaré para mi suegro: This is explain'd under the word suegra, being the same verbatim; only apply'd to the father, or the mother-in-law.

Decir el sueño y la soltura, to tell a man his dream, and the exposition of it. Met. to tell a man all one's mind with a great deal of freedom.

Prov. Tornó se le el sueño del perro: It was like the dog's dream to him. The dog dreamt he was eating a piece of meat, and lay biting and snapping, for which his master beat him, and so he awak'd without meat and was beaten. Apply'd to those who fancy they can compass great matters, and come off with loss.

Prov. Casata verás, perderás sueño, nunca dormirás: marry, and you'll see what comes of it, you'll lose your rest, and never sleep. Matrimony brings on many cares, and breaks mens rest.

Prov. De los sueños no creas malos, ni buenos: Of dreams believe neither the good nor the bad. Do not be superstitious, and give credit to any dreams at all.

Prov. Suêño sossegádo, no teme nu- bládo: Quiet sleep fears no foul wea- ther. That is, he who sleeps sound, has no apprehensions, fears, or cares upon him.

Prov. Yo no duérmo, y a todos doy mal-suêño: I do not sleep, and I break every body's rest. Said of those who because they are uneasy will suffer no body to be quiet.

VEN

VENDAVAL, the wind that brings home ships from the West-Indies, which is not fix'd, as the brisa or trade-wind, yet generally keeps between the due south and the north-west, running thro' all the points between them: they meet these winds when pass'd the channel of Bahima to the northward which brings them clear of the trade-winds that carry them to the West-Indies. It is true, Covarrubias says, that vendaval signifys viéto del vâlle, or the wind of the valley, and that is a levant; but he was not well vers'd in sea affairs: for it is most certain that vendaval is the opposite to brisa, this carrying ships to the West-Indies, and the other bringing them back; and all seamen agree in the account I have given, as does also Acosta in his Nat. hist. W. ind. lib. 3. chap. 4. p. 126. It is confirm'd to be as here set down by the Spanish manuscript coasting pilots, or wageners of the south-sea, which I have seen, and they are generally about the south-west.

VICTUA'LLA, vid. Vituálla.

VICUÑA'S, are a sort of wild beasts in the kingdom of Peru, somewhat resembling goats, but without horns, and bigger than goats, and less than large calves. No other part of the world has them but Peru and Chile, where they live on the highest mountains, and most solitary and coldest places, which the Indians call Punas. The frost and snow is so far from hurting, that they seem pleasing to them. Their colour is a light murrey. They go in flocks, and are very swift, flying from men, or other beasts, as being very fearful; and when they fly they drive their young before them. They do not appear to increase much, and therefore the Inga Kings had forbid hunting them but upon great solemnities. Since the coming of the Spaniards too much liberty has been allow'd; the Indians meet 2 or 3000, and making a ring, close by degrees, and catch as many as they please, letting go the females to breed. They shear them, and of their wool make the finest coverlets or blankets in the world; for it is as soft as silk, very lasting, and the colour being natural, never fades. They are cool and good for hot weather; and some say they are wholesom for inflammations, or the gout. The flesh of them is not good; but the Indians eat it. The fame flesh just kill'd applied to the eyes, infallibly asswages any pain in them. These beasts, also afford the precious Bezoar stone. F. Jof. Acost. nat. hist. W. Ind. lib. 4. cap. 40. pag. 299.

V I D

Prov. Viéja a estirar, y el diablo a arrugar: The old woman does nothing but pull out, and the devil wrinkles. That is, the old woman would put out the wrinkles of her face, and thinks the devil puts them in.

Prov. Castigar vieja, y espulgar pe-

VIE

lón, dos devaneos son: To correct an old woman, and to louse a poor scoundrel are two pieces of folly, or labour lost. Because an old woman is past mending, and a poor lousy fellow will never be clear.

Prov. Gustó la vieja los blidos, y la mióse los dedos: the old woman tastes the blites, and lick'd her fingers. Apply'd to liquorish people who lick their fingers after every thing they like.

VIEJAME'NTE, oldly.

VIE'JO, Adject. old. Lat. vetus.

Prov. De oficial nuevo, y de barbero viejo, y de amigo reconciliado, y de viento que entra por borado, y de madrastra que el nombre le basta, y de alnado, a tus hijos guarde dios de padrastro: From a new, or unskilful workman, and from an old barber-surgeon, and from a reconcil'd friend, and from a wind that comes in at a hole, or cranny, and from a stepmother, whose name alone is enough, and from a son-in-law, or wife's son, and from a stepfather, God defend your children! Because the new workman is unskilful and does his work ill; an old barber's hand shakes, and he neither shaves nor bleeds well; a reconcil'd friend is seldom real; the wind thro' a hole, or cranny is hurtful; a stepmother in all parts has no good name; a wife's son is not lov'd by the father-in-law, and the mother rakes all she can for him; and a stepfather is as bad as a stepmother.

Viéjo, Subst. an old man.

Prov. Mas vale viejo que me honre, que galán que me assombre: Better have an old man to honour me, than a young rake to fright me. The saying of a prudent young woman, who rather chuses a grave old man for her husband, than a mad young bully.

Prov. Al viejo nunca le falta que contar, ni al sol, ni al hogar: An old man never wants a tale to tell, either in the sun, or at the fire. Because having liv'd long they can never want talk.

Prov. El viejo por no poder, y el moço por no saber dexan las cosas perder: The old man lets things run to rack for want of strength, or vigour, and the young man for want of knowledge.

Prov. Quando el viejo no puede beber, la buessa le pueden hazer: When an old man cannot drink they may make his grave.

Prov.

V I E

Prov. Quién viejo engorda, dos mo-radas goza: He who grows fat in old age, enjoys youth twice.

Prov. Viejo amador, inviérno con flor: An amorous old man is like flowers in winter.

Prov. Aunque seas prudente viejo, no desdénas el consejo: Tho you be a discreet old man, yet do not despise advice. Good counsel is always to be hearkned to.

Prov. Del viejo el consejo: Take the advice of an old man.

Prov. El viejo en su tierra, y el moço en la agéna, mienten de una ma-nera: The old man in his own country, and the young man in another country are liars alike. The old man telling stories of many years past, and the young man of his travels, take both the liberty of lying.

Prov. Quién quisiere ser mucho tiempo viejo, comiencelo presto: He that would be long old must begin betimes.
We say, he that would be young when he is old, must be old when he is young.

Prov. Viejo sobre potro, un diáblo sobre otro: An old man on a colt is one devil upon another. That is, an old man who acts like a young one riding a colt is a devil, and the colt being naturally wild and fretted by the rider is another.

Prov. Si quieres vivir sano, házte viejo temprano: If you would be healthy, be old betimes. That is, take care of your self as old men do.

y los vicios con castigo*: Wind cleanses corn, and punishment corrects vice.

Prov. El viénto y el varón, no es bueno de Aragón: The wind and the man that come from Aragon are not good. The wind, because in respect of Castile it is a north east, which is

V I G

never good, and the men they speak ill of, only because there was formerly enmity between Castile and Aragon, when they had several kings.

Prov. Viénto soláno, agua en la mano: The east wind brings rain.
It happens so in Spain, tho with us it be no observation.

Prov. Viénto y ventúra, poco dura:
Wind and good luck are seldom lasting.

the middle part of the column.

Ovijas de viéntre, fruitful ewes.

De viéntre y lomo, by father and mother.

Prov. *Después que parí nunca mi
viéntre henchí*: Since I bore children I never fill'd my belly. It has a double meaning, either of a poor mother, who spares from her self to give to her children. Or of any other who is solicitous to look to them that she has not time to eat.

Prov. El viéntre ayúno, no oye a ninguno: An empty belly hears no body. That is, a man when he is hungry is not fit to be advis'd, or spoke to about business.

Prov. Mal áya el viéntre, que del pan comido no se le viene miénte, a curse
on the belly that does not remember bread that is eaten. A curse on ingratitude.

Prov. Sacar el viéntre de mal año:
To deliver the belly from an evil year.
Is to make use of one's time, and feed heartily when it is to be had after faring hard.

Prov. Ciento de un viéntre, y cada uno de su miénte: An hundred of one belly, and every one of his particular mind. So many men so many minds. Tho they be all brothers, born of one mother.

VIE'RNES, friday. Lat. *dies vene-
ris*.

La semana que no tiene viérnes, the week that has no Friday. There is no such, but by it they mean christmas week, when Christmas day falls on a Friday, because then they eat flesh on it, and therefore reckon it no Friday.

Viérnes santo, good Friday.

VIE'RTE, Viérto, vid. Vertér.
